

Staying prepared for Reform

Resources
to help you plan and
stay ahead of the pack

Nearly 7 out of 10 employers are highly likely to offer non-medical benefits, even if they send employees to exchanges for medical benefits.*

Regardless of the Supreme Court's ruling on The Affordable Care Act, one thing remains certain – reform has gotten more employers thinking about the value of non-medical benefits.

Guardian's "Benefits and Behavior 2012: Spotlight on Health Care Reform" study presented a potential post-reform scenario to employers in which they stopped offering group medical coverage.

In this scenario, more than two-thirds of employers said that they would still plan to offer non-medical benefits to their employees.
