iTriage® health app CEO invited to President's State of the Union

It's not every day an Aetna executive is invited to join the First Lady in the State of the Union viewing box.

Technology and innovation were among key themes of President Obama's address last night. And Dr. Peter Hudson, CEO of iTriage and one of Aetna's executives, had a prime seat. The iTriage® web and mobile app is innovation in action.

Peter and iTriage joined the Aetna family in 2011 as part of Aetna's strategy to use technology to reach people and help them make smart health care decisions. The iTriage app helps people identify symptoms and find nearby doctors that can help.

We are proud that iTriage can help people better manage their health. Please help us spread the word. Share the gray section below with customers and colleagues and encourage them to download the app.

Technology and innovation cited in State of the Union address

In his recent State of the Union address, President Obama talked about the need for innovation. The FREE iTriage® mobile app is innovation in action. It helps you with two of the most common medical questions: "What could be wrong?" and "Where can I go for treatment?"

Use iTriage to:

- Learn about thousands of drugs, diseases and procedures
- Find nearby doctors
- Make appointments
- Store personal health records

iTriage has been downloaded more than eight million times, as of February 2013.* It is available for iPhone® and iPad® mobile digital devices and the Android™ mobile technology platform. iTriage is a wholly owned subsidiary of Aetna.
